THE Government has been a long time making up its mind on the interpretation question, but the scheme which has at long! been presented will, we think, commend it. self to the legal faculty and to the public. The Governor, in his message to the Legis. a few general observations on interpretation intended to show that ideal perfection is unattainable and that the gap between present deficioncy and what is practically obtainable is not so large as a superficial consideration of the subject is apt to indicate. If the interpretation is not so bad as it might be it is certainly very far from being good. The precise measure of the deficiency cannot great to induce the Governor to present to deals with the encouragement of proficiency in the Chinese language amongst the members of the Service generally; the second with the encouragement of the acquisition of the Chinese language by European boys with a view to their employment as interpre- think, been drafted on very practical lines, ters; while the third part of the scheme relates exclusively to the Police Force. The new scheme bolds out more direct encouragement. Allowance for a teacher is to be continued, and on passing the examination an allowance, or bonus, is to be given, varying from $300 to $600, according to the examination passed form us that the O. A strong protest, we understand, worthy, and who at all events will be more painstaking if they know their chief is capable of following and checking the interpretafrom being a dangerous thing, will be found extremely useful. Apart from direct interto acquire a much better acquaintance with necessity arise. the people but will cause them to be held in

than one who does not. The scheme presented by the Governor seems admirably adapted to bring about a more general study of the Chinese language on the part of the public servants. In matters of detail it may perhaps require that second defendant was in any way to blame. some little amendment. An officer in receipt of a salary under $200 a month is novel plea that he mistook the constable for a builth, who swore that defendant had told him in the Libyan Desert, 300 niles west of Cairo, to receive an allowance of $400 on passing Chinaman. His Worship fined the first prisoner that he was getting his provisions from Lucas is 120 feet below sea level. In the same desert is tated whether, traving specied in colloquials he can go up again the exemination in the written language and receive the extra $100. por, if so, at what limit of time he may do so. There is, we believe, some dissatisfaction felt amongst those members of the Service who have already acquired a knowledge of Chinese at the provision that the money allowence for proficiency is to be given "only in respect of dialects which officers have bitherto not professed to understand, or in which they have not hitherto been employed to interpret." While we would advocate that suitable recognition should be made. either by personal allowance or otherwise. of a useful knowledge of Chinese on the part of any officer, we cannot see that those who have passed their examinations under the old scheme are entitled to come in under the new scheme. The offer made by the Government is in the nature of a roward for future exertion. The recognition of present use in Warm Climates. Dinnerond & Co., Chemists, Qualifications or past services rests on quite a different footing and must be treated in every case on its own merits. Another point that has been raised is whether the salary qualifying for the higher scale of allowance should not be placed at $150 instead of $200. Allowing that it is reasonable to make a difference, on the presumption that the more highly paid officers are men of superior eduention, and that they will prove more efficient in the use of their knowledge of the language, of division rules out a number of men whose educational qualifications ought to render them eligible for the higher scale, and that to take $150 as the limit would be more equitable. The Interpretation Commission, naturally had its attention attracted by the excellent material for an efficient interpretation

service to be found amongst the boys of the non-Chinese community, many of whom peak Chinese almost as fluently as they do English. With the exception of Mr BALL, the accomplished chief interpreter of the Supreme Court, all the interpreters for the Chinese language are Chinese, whose knowledge of English is in some instances very defective, and even where English is spoken fluently there is sometimes a want of that general education which is requisite for the thorough grasping of unfamiliar ideas when presented to them. In future appointments of Chinese interpreters we would advocate their being subjected to much stiffer examination in English language and literature than has hitherto been the case. That matter, however, does not enter into the prerent scheme, which deals solely with the acquisition of the Chiness inguage by Europeans. In order to put the suggestion of the Commissioners as to Colonial boy: to the test of experiment His Excellency proposes to appoint three student interpreters, who are to be under sixteen years of age, to have shown an aptitude for acquiring the Chinese language, and to have distinguished themselves in the examination for the Colonial scholarship or other similar competition, each to be attached to some department of the Public Service. The salary of these boys is to be $40 a month, payable subject to satisfactory progress being made, and at the end of lative Council on the subject, commences by three years they are to receive appointment to offices with salaries of not less than $100 a mouth. This seems to afford a very favourable opening for boys, and at the same time is calculated to secure really efficient intorpreters. In the Police Force also greater inducements are held out under the new scheme for the acquisition of Chinese, amounts varying from $2.50 to $10 per month. being offered to European members of the course be stated in words, but it is sufficiently | Force who pass the prescribed examinations, and $1 to $5 to Indians. In no branch of the Council a very liberal scheme for bring. the service is a knowledge of the collequial ing about an improvement. The scheme is more requisite than in the Police Force, and divided into three divisions, the first of which the encouragement now held out to the members ought to encourage its acquisition, At present the amounts given to constables for proficioncy under the old scheme are $2.50 per month for Europeans and $1 for Indians. SUPREME COURT

11th January.

IN ORIGINAL JURISDICTION. BEFORE THE BON. J. RUSSELL.

CHIEF JUSTICE. JOHANNES & Co. v. F. D. SASSOON.

The hearing of this suit was resumed. Mr. J. J. Francis, Q.C., and Mr. E. Robinson, instructed by Messra. Sharp, Johnson, and Stokes: were for the plaintiffs, and the Attorney-General (Hon. E. L. O'Malley) and Mr. Pollock, the defendant

The Atterney-General in the course of a long th address on behalf of the defence said that there was a bailment constituted by delivery and that the delivery was a constructive delivery consisting of the consent on the part of the Hongkong firm who held this opium on the terms proposed by Johannes in his letter of the 19th August In that letter and in Sassoon's answer to it both parties referred back to the original instructions given by Marad Hashin. The first term of the bailment was that the Horgkong firm should follow the instructions given them by their Bombay firm, that was, to place ten chests to realise on these and place in return certain quantities of sugar. The contract between the parties was that this opium was to be placed against the sugar purchased by plaintiff. Plain. to the vice, so disgusts 1 s wife that she jilts tiff had never presented that sugar nor had him. he over alleged his willingness to do so. Fur ther, in his evidence before the Batavia Commission he repudiated the sugar as forming part of the transaction, and when asked what substantial consideration he was to give for the opium he referred to certain bills, for which he was responsible, and stated that it was against his liability for these bills that the opium was to be placed. The question was—was there or was there not a condition to be fulfilled before that opium was delivered? He contended that there was, and that such condition had not been fulfilled. Granted that this was an absolute bailment they were not estopped from disputing the title of the bailer, and they were entitled to set up a paramount title under which they resisted the claim of the bailer. Having quoted Biddle v. Bond and other cases the Attorney General contended that the law protected the bailes against the bailor when he acted under the instructions of a party having a paramount title. If all other arguments failed then he should have to bring in the evidence of the Bushire Commission.

Mr. Francis said it would be only necessary to say a very few words. In the letter of the plaintiff there was what amounted to the posi tive statement that he would not do anything in. the matter of the sugar unless he heard from the defendant as regards the acceptances. was not plain who was the real owner of the opium, but it was certain, whoever the owner, it was handed over to the defendant for delivery. There could be no right or title to it on the part of defendant. Nothing remained to the owner of the opium except as in case of goods sold, to sue for the amount of the value. They could not sue for the opium. Plaintiff had not pleaded in any way that they had this superior title. They had not shown any authority from

> BEFORE HON. JAMES RUSSELL, CHIEF JUSTICE.

IN RE H. J. RODRIGUES. In this case H. J. Rodrigues, usher to the Supreme Court, petitioned to be adjudicated a bankrupt. Petitioner was at present detained in the Victoria Gaol at suit of J. Gomes. Mr. Wilson (of Messrs. Wotton and Deacon)

His Lordship said he did not see any reason why the potition should not be granted, but he was afraid that unless petitioner was able very clearly to show that his misfortune was unavoidable he presumed his service would be gone. The law was that when an officer in the Government Service got into pecuniary difficulties he was suspended from duty and salary. The Government after investigation into the matter might dismiss him without bringing any further charge against him. He hoped petitioner would be able to give a satisfactory explanation to Mr. Wise when he came to be examined. He did not see any use in keeping petitioner in prison so far as the detaining creditor was concerned. It was only throwing good money after bad. He (his lordship) would make an

danger of forgetting the real poet, in the multitude of (issertations about poems which need explaining. Depend upon it, Mr. Browning is He is a part like the rest, and what Keats and Scott and Tennyson give you, he gives you also, in his own manner and measure, if you take him at his best, and when he is most himself.

Without doubt the most successful lady manager in London is to be found at the East End in the person of Mrs. Sara Lane, For more years that she would care to be reminded of this popular lady has controlled the fortunes of the Britannia which is one of the largest house in London as d. although her patrons are not of the evening-d ess and bare-shoulder class, they are emphatics ly of the right sort so far as appreciation is or icerned. Mrs. Lane knows the kind of food the East Enders prefer, and it is seldem indeed that a failure has to be chronicled. Going to the "Blit" is as regular an affair in Hoxton as going to the opera is at the West End in the London season, and all the year round winter and summer, the ghost walks cheerfully. Some good men have come out here, too, notably J. B. Howe, who is well remembered by his Hoxton riends. A good melodrama, with Fincidentals, is the standing dish, but Shakespeare and other classical authors are taken on at times, and you will be supprised to see how kindly they are taken to. Mrs. Lane has done, and still does, good work on the stage herself, and I don't hink she would change the "good old Brit for Coven: Garden itself.

The cu tom of wearing crange blossoms at vedding is of comparatively recent date with us. It came to us, like most other female fashions in dress from Spain: In the latter country it had long obtained, and is said to have been originally of Moorish origin. There is, howeyer, an o I Spanish legend which gives a different account of its introduction. According to this, so n after the importation of the orange tree by the Moors, one of the Spanish Kings. had a specimen of which he was very proud and which the French Ambassador was extremely desirous to obtain an offshoot. The garlener's daughter was aware of this, and, in order to pro ide herself with the necessary dowry to enable for to marry her lover she obtained in slip, which she sold to the Ambassador at a high price. Or the occasion of her wedding, in recognition of her gratitude to the plant which had secur d her happiness, she bound in her hair a wreath of orange blossoms, and thus in augurated the fashion which has become universal. As the orange was introduced into Spain at a very early period by the Moors, this legend sufficiently establishes the antiquity of the cusom so far as that country is concerned, although many centuries elapsed before it spread over the rest of Europe.

Men be tray their real characters in a thousand different ways. The professors of the art of celineating dispositions do so in "Was it the girl's father who broke off the various feshions. One artist will undertake to describe character from the examination of a photograph; another reads indications of tastes and feelings in handwriting; nay, an American gavant has recently announced that much may be learned regarding a man by observing how he wears his boots. Every one has some small peculiarities, which to the acute observer, may furnish a clue to his disposition. There have been manifold instances of strange and incon venient resemblances between men, leading to cases of "mistaken identity," and yet probably in every instance there was some trifling and overlooked personal trait which distinguished one Drom o from the other.
